There are a variety of resources on the web that help link journalists to experts and other sources of information on a variety of topics. The following are just some resources you might want to check out.

www.globalexpertfinder.org/

Global Expert Finder was developed to bring more diverse views and broaden debates on issues of religious and political tensions between countries, regions, and within communities. It gives journalists and media professionals fast, free, direct access to some of the world's leading commentators, analysts and academics. On various topics, including politics, law, education, women's rights, human rights, terrorism, globalization, religion, and art.

www.shesource.org/shesource/

SheSource.org is an online braintrust of female experts on diverse topics designed to serve journalists, producers and bookers who need female guests and sources. SheSource.org includes spokeswomen from a variety of backgrounds, representing demographic and ethnic diversity as well as expertise in areas, ranging from security, the economy, and politics to law, peacekeeping, humanitarian crisis, and more.

http://climatechangemedia.ning.com/

The Climate Change Media Partnership is a directory of experts who are able to talk to journalists about various aspects of climate change.

www.experttweet.com/

ExpertTweet is the fastest and easiest way to find experts on Twitter. Looking for an expert? Tweet your request to find the expert you need.